

Green Power Conferences Research Analyst (Conference Producer)

The role:

Reporting to a Research Manager, the Conference Researcher will be expected to work on the development of conference agendas and topic areas. The role will be focused on conducting research projects, producing independently researched agenda's and conference products, confirming speakers and liaising with key companies & associations in the sector.

Green Power Conferences run events in locations such as New York, Chicago, São Paulo, Brussels, London, Amsterdam, New Delhi, Cape Town and Singapore; travel is an expected part of this role.

An event researcher is the master of multi tasking; researching new topics, bringing the conference project team together and continuously on the lookout for potential new speakers and partners. Ultimately the relationships the researcher builds with speakers and other industry contacts play a key role in developing new ideas and establishing a good reputation for Green Power Conferences.

Face to face contact is excellent for developing these relationships and you will be encouraged to organise meetings with relevant companies and speakers at events you attend whenever you can. Time management and a high level of organisation are essential as the candidate will be responsible for a number of time sensitive products.

The candidate will be expected to negotiate with external contacts and stake holders. Confidence and the ability to deal with senior level representatives is a must. This role would especially suit someone with strong communication skills (written and oral) and strong research skills.

Key responsibilities:

- Producing 6-7 high quality, independently researched conferences per annum with a logical and complete agenda which is an accurate representation of the industry and current state of the market segment to enable attendees to make informed business decisions
- Understand industries and their value chain quickly
- To accurately position and identify the audience for an event
- To obtain the maximum marketing potential for an event: deadlines must be met
- To communicate all the necessary information to other members of the team to maximise the revenue and success any one event can achieve
- To take in information on the renewable energy industry not only for their own projects but for the team as a whole
- Business development of new industry organisations, event ideas and event formats

Requirements:

- 6-18 months experience in a similar role
- 1st or 2:1 degree
- Interest in the renewable energy and climate change sector
- Fresh ideas and an imaginative approach
- Ability to work within a team environment
- Strong IT skills
- Languages not essential but useful

The Package:

This is an ideal opportunity to join an exciting company, in a developing market. The Research Analyst will be given plenty of responsibility and the opportunity to take ownership of their product portfolio, but there is also ample support within this close and professional team.

Training is provided, career development encouraged, work-life balance is valued and flexible working is accommodated.

Salary: £ Competitive and negotiable depending on experience.
